to look back through time
on our origin
and let the thoughts roll on down that slope to the present.
we are young, still.
yet

those scampering, life-shortening days, and contrasty op-art hours
rest easy
and now heavy
on our minds.

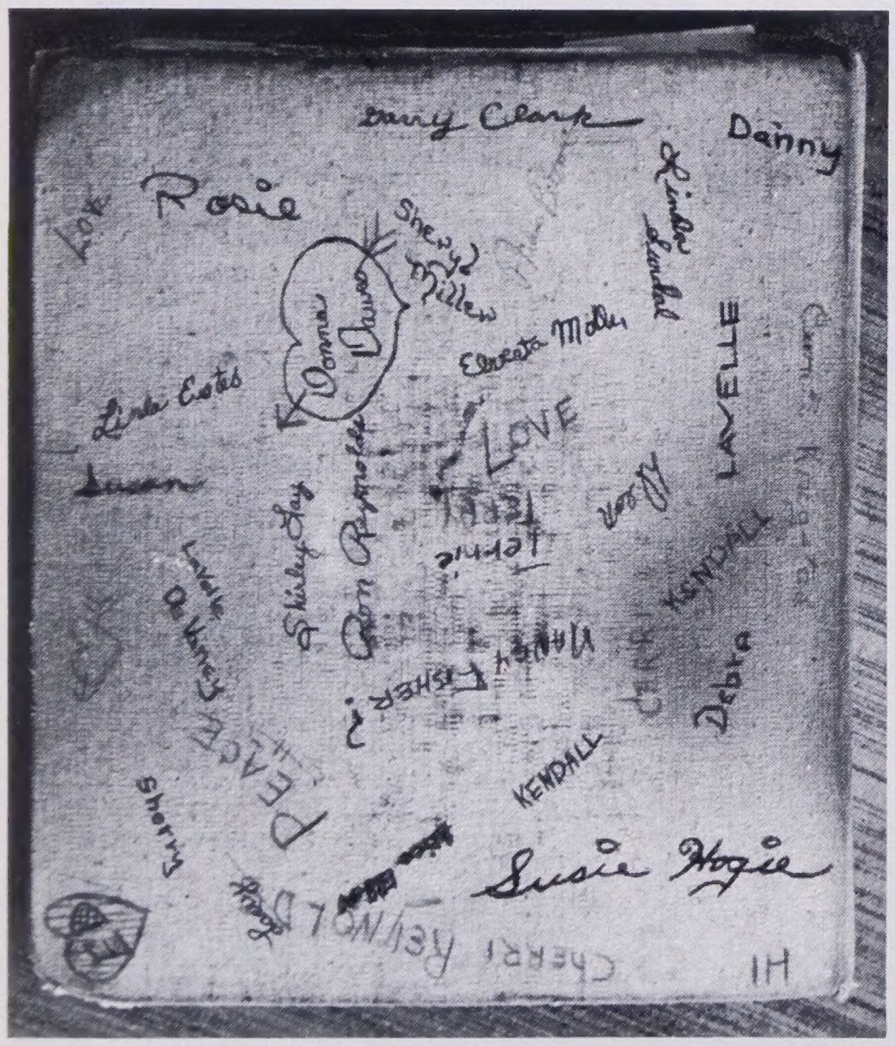

tomorrow's decisions, admittedly weighty, must be made in relation to last year's,
or when we were ten.
awesome and terrible judgments that meant nothing a month later.

and to love–people, beauty, yourself– when in the past
those people were parents, for a time, and love was a secure warmth,
a touch;
beauty–mother was always prettiest–
was excitement in colors;
and we, sometimes hungry, sometimes cold, other times happy,
were always understandable, always right.

true happiness.
that illusive state we're all trying to define,
was simple in the past,
when
standing on the swings, defying
that "sit only" ruling, was freedom, self-made,
a twirling rope was the universe in our hands, and driving 100 mph
was a reason to live.

that God of ours was up there.
big and bearded; and His book always went on top.
also,
whatever you were going to "be"
depended on if you weren't in heaven by then.
yet we're still here,
and He's still there,
and all our devices
for resolving this fall in between.

we haven't come here empty, but to continue
down this slope
without some thought, without ordering life around some purpose or reason, would be a deceptive satisfaction.

no, not empty,
the question is how full we will be when,
after four years,
we leave.

a man who can think of no better way

to give his life

than in the educating

of others

for service to God and man . . .

dedicated and

truly Christian–

encouraging us

to express

ourselves

while

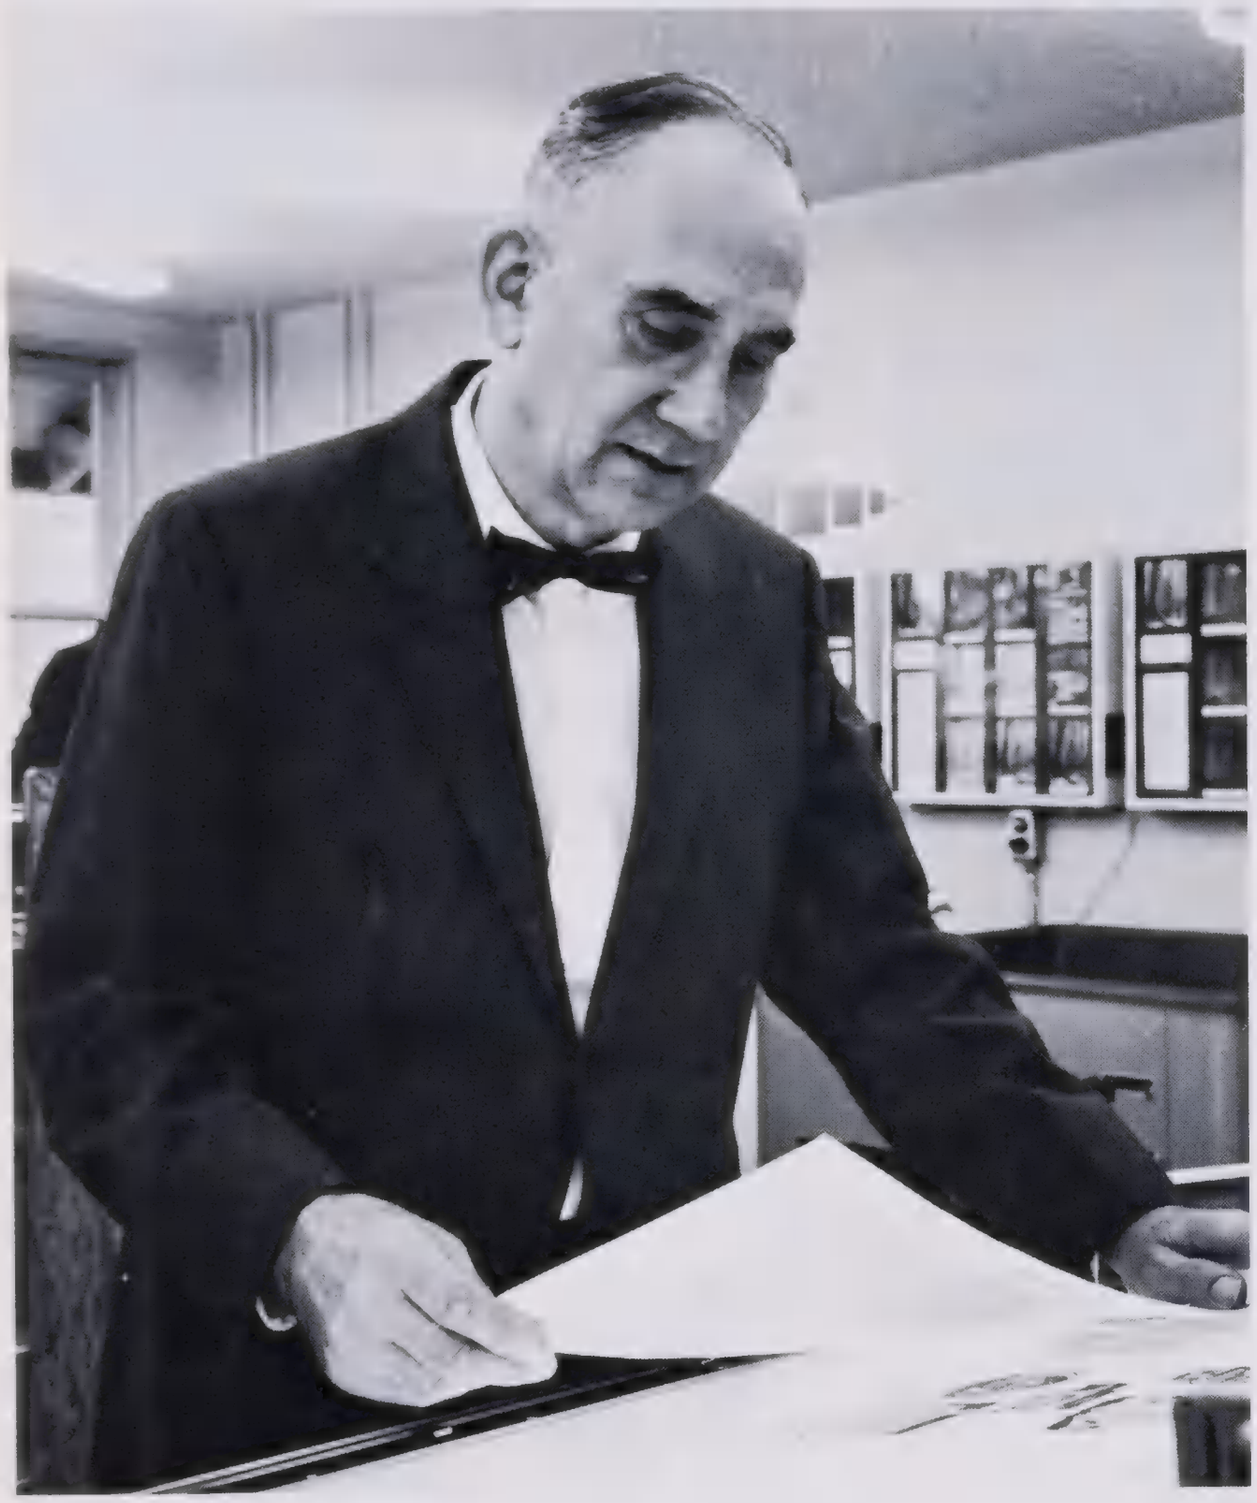

subtly injecting

wisdom

and experience

into our ideas–

he cares . . .

lives

his belief

in a God of love–

all this and more–

he is Lewis H. Canaday.

A/F

Blackie

It was six o-clock in the morning and all was well. Rays of golden sunlight began painting strips of gleaming lace across the cracked and fading ceiling of my comfortable domain. Contented with the warmth and comfort of my bed, I dreamed of courageous deeds. Fighting side by side with Zorro, saving the Lone Ranger, and finally discovering who Mr. Moonman really is. These dreams were suddenly wisked away behind the fast closing curtain of reality. A persistent rapping began to register its throbbing message into my clouded brain. Too young to swear, I sat straight up, trying to see who would dare awaken me from my heroic deeds. The rapping continued, stopping only once or twice for a short interval. My keen senses were now at work and I was able to pin point the exact location of my merciless intruder. The unholy racket was coming from the window. Was this possible? Wasn't this room on the second floor, or had our house suddenly decided to settle after all these years? I immediatly put this notion out of my mind and became quite suspicious. Being quite stupid, (a trait I have lost in the intervening years) I ventured slowly toward my foe. With me came faithful Sam, my teddy bear. I the conqueror, Sam the courageous, the fittest in battle(besides all this he could growl when laid on his back). In an emergency like thisI could always depend on the fact that he would be right beside me. I knew there was some terrible force behind this noise because mighty Sam was actually shaking. I was close to the window now.

Now, as the second and last hard cover falls to the left, we realize we've been there, and gone through.

Some of us have completed the four-year money machine that will,

when programed to society, enable us to support life in the present's complex manner.

The rest of us are working toward that goal. Think—

Is it foolish?

this education was for more than that,

remember?

Ask—

What difference does it make that certain characteristics of the noble gasses are so desirable to other elements, and that ontogeny recapitalates philogeny.

Why are balance, proportion, and perspective so important when mankind's aesthetic conclusion in general is

"I like what I like"?

What makes a two-hundred-year-old story literature, instead of just another good book?

And why is Yahweh, Lord of the Jews, the God, instead of Allah—Momammed's, or Thor, Wyrd, Aphrodite, and all those Grecian supernaturals, or Nature,

or even Abraxas.

Helter skelter or non sequiter we've been through a lot.

It was all presented, indented, and some even graded, but this concentration should render a still greater conclusion–

its goal was synthesis.

Tucked away in our minds is now a seething intellectual potency, a strength

that, unused, will ferment and destroy.

But this same conflict of knowledge, resolved and expanded through time, will initiate the developing of our purpose, our reason, our excuse to exist.
